GAPES.

The Disease in Young Chickens and How to Treat It.

This is probably one of the most serious causes of loss among chicks. It is caused by a small worm that accumulates in the windpipe until the chicks suffocate. The affected chicks constantly try to dislodge the worms by gaping and shaking the head. If the chick is quite large it can usually manage to throw off the disease. If, however, the disease attacks small chicks, they usually succumb to it, or become stunted.

There are several ways of treating gapes, but in all cases the first thing to do is to separate the unaffected ones from the rest and move them to fresh ground, as the disease frequently spreads rapidly if this precaution is not taken. The common earth worm is said to be a means of spreading the disease, as it is very frequently found to be a host for gape worms. If there is danger of gapes, use solid floors in all the coops and keep the chicks confined when there are any earth worms on the surface.

Several patent devices for the treatment of gapes are on the market; some of them are very good for the purpose, while others are of doubtful value. If the chicks are considered worth the trouble, the quill and turpentine treatment is probably about the best, and is used as follows: Dip a quill in turpentine and then insert it gently into the windpipe. The quill must of course enter the windpipe in order to effect any cure. The operator will see the opening of the windpipe at the base of the throat. Numerous complaints are made that the treatment does no good because people frequently insert the quill into the gullet instead of the windpipe.

A looped horsehair may also be used for dislodging the gape worm. Insert it into the windpipe; give it three or four turns and then remove after which the chick will cough up any worms that have been dislodged. Gape worms may be killed by placing the chicks in a closed barrel or some other convenient receptacle and forced to inhale strong tobacco fumes or those of a similar nature. This method is not recommended very highly, as it is extremely dangerous. The treatment will of course kill the chicks if continued too long and thus an inexperienced operator finds it difficult to use.

In combating this disease, as well as all others, healthy growing chicks are much more likely to overcome the trouble than weak, neglected ones.—Michigan Station.

BEEKEEPER'S CONTRIVANCE.

New Style of Metal Side and End Spacer for Brood Frames.

I am sending you a drawing of my idea of the way the metal spacers should be made, writes a correspondent of Bee Culture. If the upper one were nailed to the top-bar I do not see why it would not strengthen the frame.

Use of Metal Spacers.

corner. I should not want the lower spacer as now made, because bees would surely fill in between with propolis, in most localities (ask Dr. Miller). It might be better to have just two pieces to one frame—one at each end of top-bar, and stamped three places, and put on the other way, so as to form the end-spacer as well.

POULTRY POINTS.

Male should be selected with special reference to the shortcomings of the female.

One writer thinks that sumptuous feeding will produce more females, and spare feeding more males.

If male and females both have narrow combs they may produce chicks with single combs.

Work birds up to standard all around, instead of one point at a time. Keep all the points in view.

Milk is one of the best feeds for laying hens. It pays to divide it between the pigs and the hens.

I lost most of my early flocks last year with gapes and tried many remedies without avail. When the later chicks came off I took them to a woodlot some little distance from the usual haunts of the fowls and raised all but two, which the hawks caught.

Value of Grit.

The professional poultry raiser recognizes the value of grit, and it is to be found in his poultry house at all times. Even if the hens are permitted to run out, he realizes that they can seldom find the kind or amount of grit they need. So he supplies it. Most people that live on farms never give the matter a second thought. They take it for granted that the birds can supply themselves, as they would in a state of nature. Grit takes the place of teeth in other animals and thus it is a necessity in the mastication of food. Every farmer should make as certain provision for grit as for feed for his poultry.

WHY CHILDREN ARE DECEPTIVE.

Fear of Punishment Frequently Leads to Untruthfulness.

Untruthfulness in children sometimes arises through the fault of their elders, who suggest to them untruths, which children indorse from an innate sense of politeness and a wish to be agreeable. "Don't you like so and so?" says the elder, and the child agrees. "Isn't this pretty?" comes later on, and the child partly believes that it is pretty since the suggestion has been made, the child's idea regarding the article in question would have been that it was extremely ugly. A yet more fruitful source of untruthfulness lies in the fear of punishment, and this is particularly the case with children of delicate body or of nervous temperament. Children who are governed by love rather than by fear escape this temptation to lie, but when a child feels that punishment for a fault or failing is inevitable, it seems such a little thing to cover the frailty with a lie, and yet the child who lacks the moral courage to avow a fault suffers untold agonies of remorse for every lapse from truth. Let children be encouraged to own their faults, and even the most nervous can be made to do it, if sure that the confession takes away the punishment, or reduces it to such an extent that no bodily suffering is entailed.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

FINISHED SERMON FOR HUBBY.

Wife's Readiness and Eloquence That Was Altogether Unappreciated.

"Speaking of wives' duties," said the Manayunk philosopher, "I once attended service at a Unitarian church in Brooklyn when the pastor's voice went back on him. Went back altogether, it did. He stood there before us in the pulpit silently opening and shutting his mouth like a fish.

"His wife came quickly from her pew, and mounting into the pulpit, she waved her husband aside, took up the sermon where he had left off, finished it eloquently and afterward brought the morning service to a conclusion with prayer."

"How very helpful that was," said a listener.

"Yet the husband didn't think so," said the philosopher. "He called it officious, was quite angry, said his wife had been trying to show off."

"The question is," the philosopher concluded, "can a wife in her helpful zeal go too far?"

Leech a Weather Prophet.

A leech confined in a vial of water will prove an excellent weather prophet. If the weather is to continue fine the leech lies motionless at the bottom of the vial and rolled together in a spiral form.

If it is to rain, either before or after noon, it is found to have crept up to the top of its lodging, and there it remains till the weather is settled.

If we are to have wind, the poor prisoner sallows through his limpid habitation with amazing swiftness, and seldom rests till it begins to blow hard.

Sale of Opium in France.

According to the Echo de Paris, the government has under consideration a decree more strictly regulating the sale of opium than has hitherto been the case. The new decree will, it says, provide that henceforth only such apothecaries and druggists as receive special authorization may keep or sell opium. Furthermore, they must ascertain the object for which the drug is purchased, and keep a register of that object, as well as of the name and address of the buyer and the quantity sold.

Witch's Comb in a Window.

So many "precious" things are on sale every day that one grows rather skeptical about them. A curio shop uptown has in its window a comb with an alliterative and alluring legend that it was "worn by a witch." It is one of those high shell objects familiar in old portraits, and though it is not carved, as are many specimens, the card excites the interest of passers-by. Likely enough some girl who had ancestors in Salem, Mass., will buy the comb and proclaim it an heirloom.—New York Press.

Two Kinds of Fame.

When Haydon, the painter, visited Stratford, he held forth about Shakespeare to some rustics he met in a wayside inn. They told him that Stratford then contained "another wonderful fellow, one John Cooper."

"Why, what has he done?"

"Why, sur, I'll tell 'ee. He's lived 90 years in this here town, man and boy, and never had the toothache!"

Club for the Babies.

A Paris journalist has founded a babies' club. It is a spacious and pleasant building, with a garden and a clubhouse where games of all kinds are provided. There is a Punch and Judy show, a cafe, where sweets, cakes, tea, and various kinds of lemonade are sold to members and their parents, while there are also many toy ships and a theater.

Ominous.

"The bookkeeper," said the junior partner, "has been married nearly four months now."

"Well," demanded the senior partner, "what of that?"

"Why, he hasn't asked for an increase in salary—"

"Heavens! We must have his accounts examined."—Catholic Standard and Times.

EASY WAY OF MAKING MONEY.

Little Newsboy Well Rewarded for His Services.

The average newsboy is an accommodating little cuss. An instance of this was noted recently on a busy street corner in front of a big downtown drug store. A fashionable looking woman with a big hat and veil and trimmings had just been into the drug store to buy three or four stamps. For she had letters to mail. When she went to the mail box a serious problem confronted her. How was she going to moisten the stamps without raising her veil? And she had her veil fixed just so. Rather than spoil the precise arrangement of her veil she decided to seek outside aid.

"Here, little boy," she called pleasantly to a small newsie about a rod from her. "Won't you come and let me use your tongue for a moment?"

Of course the boy went, wondering what the catch was.

"Now, just lick this," she said, holding out a two-cent stamp. The boy licked it, and the stamp thus salvaged she stuck it on a letter. Two or three more stamps were treated in the same manner, and all the letters were dropped into the box. Then she handed the boy a dime for his pains.

The boy turned upon two or three others who had been jibing at him.

"Easy money, wasn't it?" he retorted. And they all agreed that it wasn't bad.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BEGINNING OF HER LIFE'S WORK.

Breaking the Filly for the First Time to Harness.

She was very young to be tried out in harness, but her trainer was holding the ribbons over her nevertheless. She was rearing and plunging all over the place, as far as the checked lines would allow her to go, and her little shoes paved the air and tried to dig into the concrete for all they were worth. And half a dozen "rail birds" watched the trial trot, never taking their eyes off her and looking daggers at anyone who got between them and the young one.

She happened to be as pretty a little two-year-old lassie as one would find in the five boroughs and was dressed in a big floppy white hat with a little jacket and skirt of white and red. Her little legs were covered with white stockings and her tiny feet with tan-colored ankie-strap shoes. Her mother kept her safely in spite of her gurgling plunges toward the edge of the subway platform, by the aid of a stout set of red and white harness, with silver bells on the breast strap, that the child wore. And six abledomed men stood around the lassie in a ring watching her and wearing the cheer-foldest grins you could have seen in all the town. She had begun her life-work of making victims.—New York Press.

Tiger Shooting Records.

By accounting for seven tigers with his own gun during a recent shoot in Gwalior Lord Minto, viceroy of India, has accomplished a feat of which the most successful big game shooters might well be proud, although he has not rivaled the sensational performances of a Mr. Walker, who when deputy commissioner at Nimar, actually killed four tigers in ten minutes.

F. C. Selous, who has a phenomenal record as a slaughterer of big game, once brought down three full grown lions in four shots, while his bag includes more than a hundred elephants, nearly all of which he shot on foot, and twice as many buffaloes.

In four years (1877 to 1880) Mr. Selous killed 100 buffaloes, 20 elephants, 13 lions, and over 500 other big game, ranging from giraffes (18) to zebras and antelopes. Sir Robert Harvey's guns have wrought terrible havoc in many parts of the world, from Africa and India to Iceland.

Eggs for Mr. Griffen.

Eighteen eggs for breakfast as fast as his wife could fry 'em, and then eggs for lunch—boiled, shirred, scrambled—and then 16 eggs for supper, all cooked into one long omelet—that is what John Griffen of Winsted, Conn., hankers after every day this spring. John likes eggs—he's not eating them on a bet, but just because he wants them. John says he has eaten seven young spring chickens in one day, and after his well authenticated egg record it is hardly to be doubted. Griffen says he can eat more eggs at one sitting than any man alive, and the hens on his farm are kept busy trying to cover his appetite. Forty-seven in a day is one notch that Griffen has set for other egg champions to reach, and then he was not half trying, says he. He only eats what he wants, and no more.

Question of Responsibility.

There are 1,181 students at Wellesley, and yet it is stated that only 206 of them go to church on Sundays. They all attend chapel on most of the days required, but they find life too strenuous to get up on Sunday morning to attend church. The girls are said to take more interest in almost anything else than church, but surely some of the fault must lie with the church.

Blind Girl in College.

There is a blind girl in Barnard college who has a reader who takes the notes of lectures, reads them to the blind girl and she transcribes them on her typewriter in the raised type, and studies them at her leisure. The state pays the reader $300 a year, this being the law that every blind student in academical studies has the right to $300 to be paid to a reader.
